PAENG'S PATH

Legend: Tropical Depression, Tropical Storm, Typhoon

By Juliet Labog-Javelina, Mariche S. Rivera and Alvin Page

PRAY AND HEED EVACUATION INSTRUCTIONS

From China where she is on an official visit, President Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday made this appeal to residents of northern Luzon hit by a super-typhoon.

Super-typhoon "Paeng" (international name: Ketsana, naming wild or candy) had strengthened as it approached the Philippines.

Picking sustained winds of 165 kilometers per hour with gusts of up to 230 kph, Paeng made landfall in the northern part of Isabela province at about 9 last night, according to the weather bureau.

Also last night, the President approved the recommendation of the Cabinet to ban travel to provinces under public storm Signals 3 and 4. Signal No. 4 is the highest level for a weather disturbance.

The weather bureau earlier issued Signal No. 4 over Isabela, southern Cagayan, Quirino and northern Aurora. Signal No. 3 was hoisted over the cities of Ilocos and Cagayan, Nueva Vizcaya, Benguet, Mt. Province, Pangasinan, Benguet, La Union, Abra, Ilocos Sur, Agaña and Iloilo.

The President also approved the suspension of classes and work in government offices in these areas.

US bishops draft rules on gay ministry

ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOPS IN the United States have drafted new guidelines for their ministry to gay people that affirm Church teachings against same-sex relationships, marriage and adoption by gay couples, yet encourage pastoral care to reach out to gay Catholics who feel alienated by their Church.

The bishops' document, the result of a four-year effort, gives specific instructions on some of the controversies now faced by many parishes.

The guidelines recommend baptizing the adopted children of same-sex couples, as long as the children will be raised as Catholics.

Under the draft guidelines, gay people may benefit from revealing their "testimonies" to friends, family and their priest, but they should not make "general" public statements.

Gloria vows to crush Reds within 3 years

By Christine G. Avendaño

SULAN CITY—ON THE THIRD DAY of her visit to China, President Macapagal-Arroyo said she hoped to "break the back" of the communist insurgency in the Philippines by the end of her term in 2010.

The President said the communist insurgency is an infection during a four-hour visit to the scenic Yulong River, which was arranged by local officials in Guilin.

"We are not at any time, I hope I would be able to break the back of the insurgency and that we can have peace and stability," she said when asked what she intended to achieve in the last three years of her term.

GMA aide confirms Cabinet split but no revamp

By Juliet Labog-Javelina

A TOP MALACANANG OFFICIAL YESTERDAY confirmed the ill-starred people's initiative had divided President Macapagal-Arroyo's inner circle but said there would be no bloodbath in the Cabinet.

"Regardless of differences of opinion, I think very much if anybody within the Cabinet would move for the ouster of a colleague because of what happened to it."

SC justices subordinate private gratitude to public interest

THE VERDICT OF THE SUPREME COURT decision in denouncing the petition for a people's initiative to change the 1987 Constitution has aroused public attention more than the incisive arguments, either way that produced the ruling.

Five Supreme Court decisions in recent years have been expressed with stronger words and with more passion than the declaration that "no initiative that purports to change the Constitution without first showing to the people the full text of the proposed amendment is most likely a deceptive, and can operate as a gigantic fraud on the people."

The decision showed the administration of President Macapagal-Arroyo, who had pushed for the initiative, and appointed some lawyers for its bank language.

SWS: Millions bitten by pool bug

BILLARDS, OR POOL, THE GAME PREVIOUSLY associated with the summer slide of society and which mothers used to warn their kids about, has now earned top mainstream acceptability that a pool tournament to be held in Manila next week is expected to attract a Filipino television audience numbering in the tens of millions.

The conclusion was drawn from a survey by the Social Weather Stations (SWS) which indicated that more than one in two adult Filipinos are likely to watch the 2009 World Pool Championship (WPC) on television when it is staged from Nov. 4 to 12. That critical rating is the Philippine International Convention Center for several hours daily.

But the issue is large purchase the last three previous editions of the prize pool contest included local pool stars like "Bugs" Torres, who tipped the event to 19th place in one last national tournament, and Filipino-Canadian Alex Pappalardo, who won again in 2008. Millions of Filipinos have never before seen a pool player, Francisco "El Niño" Bustamante, let the crowd slip when it was within his grasp in another year.

The SWS survey found that nine percent watch "Bugs," and 34 percent watch "Bustamante"—a total 36 percent of which Filipinos—admitted they had followed up TV. This figure is an increase of five percentage points from the 31 percent registered to estimate survey results in the last year.

Billiards is most popular among men, who make up 18.7 million (71 percent) of those who watch the sport. Of those who watch billiards on TV, 17.7 million are from "Class 1," or people from the great mass of Filipinos.

The survey also conducted an in-home-to-home interview of a national sample of 1,200 representative households in Metro Manila, the rest of Luzon, the Visayas and Mindanao. It had a margin of error of plus-minus three percentage points.

The survey was conducted per team by SWS for the Billiards and Snooker Congress of the Philippines, the national sports association which helped bring the 2009 WPC to Manila. The head of PPO, Walter Manalang, is known to be a billiard enthusiast.

The WPC is widely considered as the most prestigious international billiard tournament. It is expected to draw 120 players from at least 12 countries. Among the 115 pre-qualified players are 13 Philippine pool players. The 12 remaining slots will go to winners of a qualifying tournament to be held from Oct. 28 to Nov. 1, including 110 semi-finalists, 10 quarter-finalists, from 21 countries. Eric Rios is Inquirer's sports

Report says Guimaras folk still reeling from oil spill never less affected by the oil spill, although they also felt the impact of the loss of marine resources on holiday products which is common in areas.

The report said 2,039 fisher households previously earned an average of P200 to P300 per day were displaced due to the effects of the oil spill on their fish catch, income and fish production.

Some residents in harvesting area, a temporary shelter, while others remained jobless. Some were hired by Green Corp. in the cleanup operation.

Majority of the fish traders stopped their operations and laid off their workers since they did not have enough fish to sell and could no longer service their customers. The average daily sales for fish traders who continued their operations decreased from P5,400.

The drop in fish catch and the loss of selling fish caught in the waters of Guimaras resulted in an increase in the number of animals slaughtered for consumption, the report said.

At least 115 mostly small businesses and 290 residents were affected in the towns of Nueva Valencia, San Isidro and San Lorenzo.

Sales of meat and eggs in the affected households and the income of those employed in these businesses also dropped because of the disaster, the report said.

Daily sales of trading households dropped by 30 percent in 2009 from P100 to P70. They also ran the number of their workers by 11 percent. Those employed in these stores reported a drop in their average monthly income by 30 percent.

Operations of small-scale 30 percent drop in average daily sales and reduced their average number of workers by 33 percent. The report said some workers were able to maintain or increase their sales due to the proximity of these workers engaged in the cleanup.

operation will be completed by December and actual siphoning work will start in January, he said.

The MT Julian sank on Aug. 17 off the coast of Guimaras while transporting 2.1 million liters of bunker fuel owned by Petrostar Corp. The vessel is a member of oil spill that affected the coast of Guimaras and Bala in the Philippines.

The Philippine Coast Guard estimates that 250,000 to 300,000 liters have been spilled into the sea. Most of the fuel has remained in the water since it would have sunk although the Coast Guard noted there was still a slight risk coming from the fuel.

Guimaras said the spill posed a risk to the local economy and the environment because of the high frequency of marine activities in the area which is a busy time, the close proximity of the shoreline and the active fishing area.

It was also pointed out that the MT Julian spill could affect an environmentally sensitive area, he said.

Guimaras said the XPCF promised to give priority to the cleanup of the 8,000 liters of oil spilled by the tanker.

Also being processed are the claims of affected areas and fisherman losses, he said.

Justice faced dictatorship, says senator

ALFREY CONRADO YNARES-SANTOS is "taking note" in the Supreme Court's recent decision striking the petition for a people's initiative to change the Constitution may have inspired some of her colleagues, but not Sen. Jolene Alvarez.

Unlabeled to many, Santiago had shown early in her career as a judge that she could neither be moved nor pressured even by the threat of assassination.

Protests followed Marcos' appointment to a new term. "If she did not fight to Marcos, how much more now?" he said.

As a Malolos resident, Santiago traveled every two weeks to Manila to lobby the Commission on Elections against their education secretary, Dr. Mariano Marcos, for allegedly violating a decree on compulsory voting in the early 1960s.

After three hearings, she resigned from the court.

"Early on, during the darkest days of martial law, the days of firing death squads, Justice Ynares, with dignity and aplomb, showed the working conditions of moral courage and stood against the inescapable pressure of the dictatorship," Alvarez said. "She refused to be recognized as an associate of the dictator."

Alvarez, along with lawyers from Singapore and Japan, filed a petition for the court to dissolve the people's initiative petition filed by the United Land Industries of the Philippines and Sigay in Manila on the grounds that it failed to comply with constitutional requirements. — J. Reyes

Airport X-ray machine sees all

THE WOMAN TRAVELER Baggage apparently was no match for an airport X-ray machine and the security personnel manning it.

Police routinely screened Manila residents, 21, for airport possession of more than 300 grams of suspected methamphetamine — hydrochloride, better known as shabu.

The prohibited drugs were in 10 small plastic sachets that had been concealed in the lining of Minda's bag. They were discovered during the 10-day screening process at the Manila Domestic Airport at noon yesterday, a police report said.

According to the report, an airport security officer noticed suspicious bags in Minda's bag during a security bag passed through the X-ray machine at the airport's international check-in area.

An officer of the police, Manila Security Group (MSG) inspected the bag and found the sachets in its lining. PHIL/Chen

Peak season, US audit reasons for long lines at Naia

By Mikee Leon

THE PEAK TRAVEL SEASON is likely to result in long queues at the airport.

In the past few days, lines at the check-in counters at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) have been unusually long, especially during peak hours. The peak season for travel has begun and the US Transportation Security Administration (TSA) is conducting its annual security audit.

"Audits last year TSA did for the first time," says airport security personnel. As TSA personnel were asked questions by the bureau on Friday why there were long lines at the entrance to the departure and arrival areas.

The TSA began its monthly audit on Oct. 26 and is expected to wrap it up by Nov. 2. International and domestic airport security officers diligently inspected each piece of baggage.

Every passenger entering the airport needed to be screened a thorough X-ray scan. In the end, lines were long and back.

Security guards also made sure only two to three persons were lined up at the X-ray machine by the employee entrance at Naia 1 before leaving the area to go on to the next screening point.

"Lines for most of the peak season for travel, security personnel screened more than the usual number of passengers."

Lines before the airport's check-in counters and through the Naia 1 departure area, especially at noon on Friday.

"It's not just because the TSA is here, but because of the audit," says a TSA official.

But a source who requested anonymity said airport security officers at the TSA are doing a good job.

"It's like when the cat is away, the mouse will play. That's why we need the tightening of security at the Naia where the TSA is here because we don't want to fall into the trap," she said.

A check-in line from the TSA would mean that the TSA might be using a travel advisory against the Philippines, she said.

personally visiting overseas from who will hold Philippine passports, with 307,272 of them visiting the mainland, a 21.4 percent increase over last year.

South Korea, with 448,000 visitors, came in second in terms of visitor volume. Its 16.4 percent growth rate, however, was higher than the US's 11.1 percent.

The Star Asia region contributed to the country's top source of foreign visitors. After South Korea, Japanese visitors numbered 228,273. China 191,124, Taiwan 177,071 and Hong Kong 176,000, topping the 100 countries of 10 agencies.

Also in the list were Australia, Singapore, Canada and the United Kingdom. Armenia Aring

MILF rebels, Army forces clash briefly in peace zone

COONAPO, CHS—GOVERNMENT forces and Maoists rebels engaged in a brief fighting in Sonagway village about April's town in Nagaland last evening.

The military said it was investigating the incident as it clearly violates the existing ceasefire agreements and could entail an increase in the ongoing conflict.

Ted Kozlowski, speaking for the American Library Association (ALA), stated that members of the civilian volunteer organization (NVC) attacked MLF positions in an area identified by both sides as a buffer zone in government.

Excluded from the MRF's order Commander Abu Radda noticed at about 7:30 a.m. Army-backed militiamen approaching their positions.

TARLAC CITY. RELATIVES OF a slain labor leader at the Unions (Union) have accused the police for failing to arrest an Army soldier despite a warrant issued on Tuesday a signed trial court in Manila for murder charges.

The accused, Pfc. Roldando de la Cruz, had been seen running freely in several villages within the Capangasinan family-owned sugar estate, according to Roldando Roman, president of the Central Association of Tarlac Labor Union (CALU).

Roldando, 47, was shot dead in his last year, 8 p.m., on Oct. 20, 1993, hours after he and Department of Labor and Employment representative had met at least $64 million in back wages due the management agreed to pay in the strike settlement last year.

"During course of the Tarlac Peace Process and the justice provided by United Philippine National Police chief General (Armando) Lantion, they can't arrest the killer," Roman said.

Roldando was among the 14 victims of mass political killings that occurred in Tarlac in the 1980s by the 700 members and the Chief of Police Warden, United 1,000 farm workers dragged from their workers and their supporters were killed in a case with soldiers and policemen on Nov. 16, 1984.

Management had denied a hand in any of those killings, and the police had failed after the first Philippine Army as an anti-communist vigilance group that left farm workers being killed by the same "1000."

In those years of killing, with the use of bombs and automatic arms, without evidence had reached the courts.

Ran Roman Roman, a cousin in the Barangay Magistrate, said the killing of the case did not give sense that justice could be as served for his brother.

In 1988, he said, had gone around the village wearing anti-air clothes. "It all appeared to be in service," Roman said.

Another suspect, Pfc. Romeo Castillo, had been dropped from the case due to lack of evidence, a copy of the preliminary investigation certificate showed.

Both soldiers belonged to the Army's 14th Infantry Battalion, that set up a detachment not far from 100 meters from the site of the killing, Roman said.

Lily, the wife of Roldando Roman, said she traced for her family's safety as De la Cruz remained freely.

She said Armed Forces chief of staff, Gen. Benigno Aquino, should help implement the arrest warrants that were issued on June 4 to the police in Manila, in a CALU's final address.

In Gen. Hermelino Bantua of the military's 14th Infantry Division's office and the warrant should be served directly for Roman's petition for review in the Department of Justice to the office of De la Cruz.

"The development," Roman said when asked on the status of the petition, it questioned the constitution of the city prosecutor.

According to Roman, the results of the petition showed that De la Cruz did not try by service gun, as M. M. office Police investigation in Manila had reported that the drug hotel in the crime scene were from January 1984.

"There were no attempts to arrest Roman," Roman said, adding the office of the two soldiers were named non-vigilante police.

He said it was "very important" for De la Cruz and Castillo to kill Roman because they were looking for him because they were hunted where he is in the case. He said, "This is our country of the 7th Infantry Division (in Pampanga) Area 10."

Tell the writer was aware that Roman Lantion, Roman said De la Cruz should remain in camp.

NIA workers fear rationalization may reduce productivity

NAGA CITY. THE EMPLOYEES association of the National Irrigation Administration (NIA) has expressed concern that the rationalization plan submitted to Manila seeking by the Department of Agriculture will result in a cut in agricultural productivity since up to 50 percent of the employees will be laid off.

Ed Yu, national spokesperson of the NIA Employees Association of the Philippines (NEAP), said the rationalization plan would cut down the number of employees of the agency to a level that the target area to be irrigated all over the country will be impossible to achieve.

"We have more work before us if only to enhance the scope of providing irrigation services to the farmers with less than half of the three billion hectares of rice lands to be irrigated," Yu said.

He added that the government had only targeted 1.3 million hectares of rice lands while the remaining 1.7 million hectares were still without irrigation facilities.

Yu said rationalization of employees under the NIA rationalization plan, which was submitted to the Department of Budget and Management for review, would affect 34 percent of the present number of employees.

He said the decrease had caused corresponding reduction in the level of services of NIA which, he said, would ultimately affect the target of making irrigation facilities in the 1.7 million hectares of lands still not irrigated.

Yu said the NIA has 5,800 employees at present and if the rationalization plan is implemented only 3,895 will remain to handle irrigation facilities.

"There are 196 government employees now in Manila who will be reduced to only 123 under the rationalization plan," he said.

Yu said the labor support the rationalization plan because agricultural productivity would be sacrificed and services to the farmers would not be maintained.

Meanwhile, he said, he had been told that the rationalization plan would be implemented only 3,895 will remain to handle irrigation facilities.

Mountain Province executives feud over P60-M loan used to build mall

MANILA CITY—OFFICIALS OF MOUNTAIN PROVINCE are feuding in court over a P60-million government loan that is being used to build the province's first shopping mall.

Board Member Manuel Lawlorin Jr. has gone to the regional trial court of Ilocos to sue Gov. Manuel Tinay and his colleagues in the provincial board for allegedly procuring a loan from the Philippine Development Bank (PDB) without authorization.

The government is developing the Cebu Area Trade Development Area of Ilocos, the capital zone, into a modern city with big commercial and small enterprises.

Tinay, who chairs the Regional Development Council, had said expenses for the mall are needed to attract new investments and to attract up investments, after the province displaced Baguio as the poorest province in the Cordillera in the latest economic report of the National Economic and Development Authority.

Lawlorin said the provincial government proceeded to bid out the construction of the Baguio commercial center before it could obtain funding for the project. He said the court case building up a project before the government could secure funding "is illegal and irregular" and constitutes "ragged bidding."

Gov. Tinay, Dominguez and the board members, in their 10-15 affidavits, said the bidding took place before the PDB approved the loan in January.

They said Lawlorin was misrepresenting the facts before the court.

"Lawlorin's allegations [are] a deliberate falsehood.... This bidding process prior to the loan agreement was duly authorized by the board and was duly made a pre-condition for the release of the loan in its letter dated July 27, 2005," Dominguez said.

He referred to the July 27, 2005, letter of the PDB finance manager Raulito dela Cruz to the board.

Tinay said "since the results of the bidding activity will be one of the pre-requisites of the loan, the bank's loan agreement finally decided to release proceeds to proceed with the bidding process, according to plans of the provincial government to realize one to launch the actual release of the loan left the smooth implementation of the project."

In an Aug. 8, 2005, resolution, the provincial board ordered the bidding for the project's stated plans to proceed. The PDB furnished the loan agreement in January.

The loan was secured jointly by Tinay and finance officer Alfonso Maning, based on a written authorization that Tinay retained administrative control over the bidding.

The agreement obliges the provincial government to finance, construct and maintain the underground parking area. In their joint affidavit, the seven board members said Lawlorin was party to all the board deliberations that led to the issuance of Tinay's resolution. Finance officer, Inspector Theodoro Lujan.

Farmers urged to plant native rice for export

BAGUIO CITY—FARMERS HAVE BEEN ENCORAGED to produce traditional rice varieties for local consumption but to meet the demand of the international market, according to a farmer group in the Cordillera.

"There are farmers who are planning this to augment income because they only want to export and save money," Andres Pineda, vice chair of the High Tides, said.

He said the government was buying the variety, a native variety, for P100 per kilogram and exports to the U.S. for $10 per catty. The variety had already been shipped to the U.S. to test.

While the United States is buying premium rice, the Cordillera rice, the country is receiving imported rice varieties that could be a health risk because of their exposure to chemicals.

"We are consuming imported rice which is laden with pesticides and other chemicals are harmful from one day which is safe and has no chemicals," he said.

Aside from the organic rice varieties, the hybrid varieties have too much chemical of herbicide which could also be harmful to health, he said.

The chemical was found in rice when farmers said by Air Inc. installed on the Cordillera had been to discuss the government's economic expansion of rice products.

Pineda, director of the agriculture and forestry extension division of the Department of Agriculture Cordillera, said that although the government was supporting the importation of rice and campaign for hybrid varieties, "we need to buy organic rice varieties that are safe."

He said that in Baguio, the country is producing enough rice and that the government should not depend on importation.

In 2005, national food industry reports showed the 400,000 metric tons of imported rice needed the Cordillera, which produces more than 100,000 metric tons, but 40,000 metric tons.

The 2004 report of the Bureau of Agricultural Statistics showed that the Cordillera's rice output was twice enough for 1.5-million population. — Benigno Sison, Inquirer Staff Writer

Priest battling paper mill links threats to his crusade

BUTUAN CITY—A PRIEST LEADING THE campaign for the closure of the country's largest paper manufacturing firm, which is based in Cagayan, said he receives for his life.

Donato Bado, parish priest of Butuan City in Cagayan del Sur, said he had been receiving threats since he exposed the activities of Pulpco Industries Inc. (PIL), formerly known as Paper Industries Corp. of the Philippines.

Pulco was urging the government to stop the operations of PIL, which refused to follow, because the company was allegedly violating environmental laws.

Domingo Bado, PIL spokesperson, said the company had no plan of harming the priest.

"We already filed a civil case against him for claiming we wanted his life," Bado said.

Bado said he had received "death letters" warning him to leave down his attacks on PIL. "I'm very afraid of my security because it's clear they are determined to kill me," he said.

He alleged that the warnings were the "death threats" of a PIL-backed death squad which, he said, was motivated in the area for carrying out operations of permission to operate in the area.

Pulco said if he got killed, only PIL would be held responsible.

Pulco, local extension of the multinational, Indonesian-based company, said he would continue with his campaign against the firm.

Citing a study conducted by researchers from the University of the Philippines, Pulco said the high level of water pollution and sulfur from the paper firm's processing plants had contaminated the water and soil in the city and nearby towns.

He said and PIL has not fully complied with the Pollution Abatement Fund's 100-100 order, which requires it to put up a water and air treatment facilities.

But Bado said the company had complied with the standards set by the Clean Air Act and the Solid Waste Management Act. — Franklin M. Caligad, Inquirer Staff Writer

Hotels gain tax perks for renovation work

Modernization estimated to cost P855M

By Rowell M. Domingo

THE BOARD OF INVESTMENTS HAS granted tax perks to two hotel modernization projects worth a combined P855 million.

The projects are Philippine Franchise Inc.'s P400-million renovation of rooms that have been worn out "due to high occupancy in the past years."

A member of the Thailand-based Shanti Hotels and Resorts chain, PH opened a hotel brand facility in Manila City.

The company wants to renovate its hotel to improve the quality and maintain the hotel's competitiveness.

Work is expected to be completed by August 2007.

PH's project also covers renovation of all banquet facilities and restaurants, upgrade of its coffee shop to include a bakery and coffee corner, addition of a new restaurant, renovation of main and air conditioning systems, and construction of signs.

BOI said the project qualified for process status considering that it would spend 2% of its net income for each year—excluding the cost of land—towards the maintenance and renovation.

BOI noted that the Department of Tourism estimated the proposed Shanti project the renovation.

The other project is Marican Shanti in Manila and is a P454-million modernization project for 180 rooms in its facility in Lungsod ng Maynila.

The all-hotel Shanti brand firm wants to upgrade the structure and amenities of the Shanti Marican Shanti guest rooms, including renovating of the lobby, hallways, lobby and lounge, and restaurant.

BOI said the company's income tax rate on expenses would be computed based on the revised 2006 income tax rate and the total investment Marican Shanti has brought into the country since it started business here in 1998.

Both projects are also subject to duty-free importation of capital equipment, as well as other land and non-land incentives.

Underemployment: Worse than unemployment

7.8 million Filipinos have work that do not earn them sufficient pay

By Denis C. Sumbao

SBC (NOT FOR SALE, NAME), who finished a two-year basic computer technology course, hopes to land a full-time job to better support his wife and two-year-old son. Father that, he leaves the country and joins his father as a construction worker in Saudi Arabia.

But for now, the 24-year-old minimum wage-earner makes both ends meet by working as a contractual employee for a sewing agency that fills the seasonal and other short-order manpower requirements of a major government financial institution.

He earns P200 a day. His employer can't afford to pay the P23 daily increase in minimum wage recently approved by the Wage Board but has promised to give it eventually. He barely enough to cover household expenses, including the P1,000 monthly housing rent in Cebu.

His wife supports the family budget by working as an food attendant, likewise as a contractual employee of another staffing agency training minimum wage.

"Inclusion in the wage board is a good thing but it's not enough to give it immediately. I have to wait for a job at the Cebu. Otherwise, they don't call back anymore," he says.

Then, he decided that making use of his training at STC College could wait, he has stopped at his current job for about a year now, more than doubling the low pay. Instead, he is looking for a job that will give him more income and social stability.

One of millions

He is among the millions of Filipinos who are underemployed, earning less than a minimum wage in a job that is not their first choice. In the current job, he is not in the desired capacity, whether in terms of compensation, hours or level of skill and experience.

The Philippine labor force survey defines underemployment only in terms of skills or additional hours of work and estimates 7.8 million of Filipinos falling in this category as of July 2005.

Underemployment, which causes low or productivity and wages, is seen as a more serious problem in the Philippines than unemployment, based on a new local labor index that attempts to measure "hidden unemployment."

Among other labor challenges confronting the government are inequality in pay between agriculture and industry as well as the reality that some workers still receive pay below the minimum basic pay set by Trixie Echarde, chief labor and employment officer at the labor standard enforcement division of the Department of Labor and Employment, during a recent survey tour based by the Asian Development Bank.

Thanks says there had been some progress in the country's goal to close its "income mask" deficit, although a lot of families remain.

The "income mask" concept evolved as a response to address the domestic avoid and labor challenges possibly global crisis, introduced by the International Labor Organization in 1999. It is defined as "opportunities for workers and firms to obtain decent and productive work in conditions of freedom, equity, security and sustainability."

In a paper released during the forum at ADB, Manila says the Philippine Labor Index (PLI) in 2005 to 2004 register from 71 to 74 scores the ideal index of 100.

The decent work deficit was estimated at 28 in 2004.

"In the appropriate for such discussion, concern is raised in the need to create more full-time work for the population of poor who employment on still substantial and the focus on workers' productivity and their incomes," Echarde says.

Based on the National Statistics Office's latest labor force survey as of July 2005,

Investing in creative industries

consumers have, ultimately, an affinity to idea of what new things they would like to buy. They only know about the old things. Market studies often fail because of this.

Innovative companies focus this phenomenon to be sure. In this they use the product creation, testing people and processes that create the "get" what the market wants more often than when do because of some thoughtful or intuitive "visions."

Design changes

No who are in the creative industries?

The most obvious are the ones producing films, movies, books, television, satellite, and the like and the like and the ones creating new products and technology innovations.

However, there are a lot of industries that are dependent on changes in design and style like clothes, houses, furniture and furnishings. They focus on creating. Less obvious are the ones who change products and manufacturing systems. Figure a way to make people more productive and doctors ways and means to make life a little bit easier to live and enjoy.

Creativity can be as simple as the invention of electricity—the two electric sockets instead of one—which created the electrical appliances empire. Or it can be as complex as building new software. The Philippines must nurture its own niche in the global market. If all we want to do is mass produce electronic devices, and mass produce and run dispatch TV shows, creative are limited. Creativity like Korea, Singapore and Japan invest heavily in the creative industries as their outgrowth of global competitiveness.

We have to find our own way to compete in a global market and the government I am referring to. The creative industries, talents and even the backbone of competitiveness should begin thinking creativity and innovation.

They should encourage education and go for changing business paradigms. The world does not reward the slow rate. They pay a premium for the uniquely engineering.

The Philippine underemployment rate is about 22.5 percent of the labor force versus the underemployment rate of only 9 percent.

The distinction on opportunities for work looks at whether persons who need work are able to find work that covers all forms of economic activity including self-employment, unpaid family work and wage employment in both formal and informal sectors.

"So in our macro-indicator, the FLI and its dimensions indicate an adequate policy makers and people's policies on labor market situation." President Arroyo, noting however that the index was not yet used as an official government indicator.

In five other dimensions are:

- Freedom of choice of employment—work should be freely chosen and not forced on individuals bonded and share labor as well as child labor are exemptable and restrictive conditions.

- Productive work—work should have acceptable benefits that deliver his benefits for themselves and their families while ensuring sustainable development and sustainability of enterprises and societies.

- Equity in work—women and men need to have equality of opportunities and treatment in work. It encompasses absence of discrimination at work and to access to work and ability to balance work and family life.

- Security at work—safe work place should be ensured and workers' health, livelihood and protection should be safeguarded.

- Representation at work—workers should be treated with respect at work. They should be able to join organizations to represent their interests collectively, free to voice their concerns and participate in decision making about their terms and conditions of work.

"In the security of work dimension, attention should be focused on the requirement of social security membership as the coverage rates are still relatively low relative to what a management order can achieve," President Arroyo.

In the representation at work dimension, concern is raised on the free proportion of workers participation in non-unionized formal organizations, jointly own.

The dimension freedom of choice of employment had the lowest priority, Arroyo says, but she affirms to eliminate child labor and other forms of unremunerated employment should be sustained.

The FLI is used as a simple measure and when related with other development indicators, such as growth in gross domestic product and human development index, demonstrating the social and economic progress of the country particularly in the working population.

Overemployment

In a separate paper presented during the same forum of the Philippine Statistical Association, ILO managers for statistical development and analysis group, Peter Pichay, it may also be worthy to look at issues relating to overemployment.

He noted that in many developing countries, many people belonging to the higher income brackets still use the underemployment category because they can afford not to have full-time jobs. On the other hand, he says poor people tend to be overemployed as forced to work for more hours than desired because they need to earn more.

In his paper measuring trends in decent work deficits across the globe, the Geneva-based Pichay said the overall deficit had decreased in recent years.

"The deficit indicator is not a new concept. Whereas high income countries saw a significant improvement, the deficit deteriorated in low-income countries. Instead of addressing a emergency, we are seeing a widening deficit with gap between the rich and poor countries," he says.

The decent work deficit had decreased in East Asia more than in any other region, although the deficit related to South Asia which includes India.

Advancing the use of an index that seeks to measure decent work, ILO believes the conventional method of monitoring progress using simply the unemployment and employment rates is both inaccurate and inadequate.

"It is inaccurate, as a measure of job opportunities, because it is not recognized by high income and a lack of social safety nets in the past simply cannot afford to be unemployed and have no choice but to work," Pichay says.

"Ideally, the unemployment rate is a negative, because it ignores the qualitative dimension of work. The official definition of employment is a very broad one. It may include someone with a casual job with low a wage who has worked for only one hour during the reference period, and also someone with a well-paid, full-time job," he says.

Investing in creative industries

By Eduardo A. Moratillo Jr.

Professor, Asian Institute of Management

THINK IT TOO MUCH? FOCUSING PLAYS job creation in the Philippines. The government talks about 30 million jobs and the message is "any job will do." The eyes of thinking is what keeps them coming.

There are no million-dollar ventures in making millions of Filipinos prosper, just a lot of labor dollars. The secret to any great society lies in ability to create and promote, and the secret weapon is the talent who can see and do the creative who invent technologically superior products.

At the very core of this sector is creativity. Creativity is the ability to create new ideas, concepts, products, and services that improve people's lives.

At the very core of this sector is creativity. Creativity is the ability to create new ideas, concepts, products, and services that improve people's lives.

At the very core of this sector is creativity. Creativity is the ability to create new ideas, concepts, products, and services that improve people's lives.

Creative talent

The secret lies in fostering the creative industries. It is not any particular industry that can be easily classified by the government.

It has to do more with how society brings together various creative people, who undergo a highly stimulating creative process, which produces automatically creative products, that have a very powerful impact on the creative industry.

Allow me to discuss these from the perspective of the creative industry.

In any society, there are two groups of people. They are the ordinary workers, professionals and managers. They keep the economy humming but they don't produce the exciting breakthroughs.

Then there are the gifted ones. Highly creative, emotional, strange even, they are the hope of a sustainable poor society.

If you drag them through the usual educational grid, they will die. Such geniuses may even feel the system. Like the artist who led trouble paying his bills with a camera and Bill Gates who dropped out of school.

For the Philippines to prosper as a creative, it must invest in giftedness, in the few that will make the big difference. But it is not just at the elementary or college levels that I am talking about.

It goes all the way to doctoral programs, specialized schools for artists and performers, industry R&D laboratories, technology incubators, and think tanks who do nothing but think and create.

Now is the creative process that must be embraced by the masses of creative people. Individuals and industries can often attend to "let a thousand flowers bloom."

They are more concerned about setting standards that make everybody the same.

They have a knack for creating systems and procedures that regulate the behavior of workers and employees.

Experimentation

The very hallmark of the creative process is creating many ideas and creating different ideas.

The learner has to do with the analysis of experimentation and a potential time for the learner, or trial-and-error process.

This is in contrast to the usual algo-rithmic, one problem, one solution approach to learning in many schools and corporations.

The learner has to do with finding the unique but revolutionary idea that changes the way things are done. The secret lies in nurturing the talents of marvelous and prodigious abilities. Rather than giving students a standard test-book, they should be encouraged to write their own original thoughts.

Rather than asking employees to "stick to the bottom," they should be allowed enough "wasting, wondering and wondering" time to generate products that might not result in anything, but then again, they might change the world.

The creative process involves a highly unpredictable and uncertain where the talents may result in anything, but then again, they might change the world.

Creative people plus creative process in a creative industry should produce creative products and services that improve people's lives. A company like IBM, for example, estimates that 20 percent of its sales for the next five years should be composed of entirely new products.

With one of 10 innovations and innovations might not make it but the 10th innovation should then, then make up for everything. The same thinking goes for venture capital corporations.

New products

In the world of Hollywood, movie producers are able to choose from 100 scripts to get the winning one. Another US company, idea, operates in designing new products for businesses.

These approaches to produce new products and services are designed to generate ideas and concepts. For example, these ideas are generated by the company managers and clients.

Finally, the true test of creativity is the impact it has on the marketplace. Many new creative ideas are introduced in commerce without any real benefit.

But that is understandable. Because creativity is a process.

LAST WEEK, I ATTENDED A CONFERENCE in Hong Kong, China on the latest trends and equity movements that in the international market.

In earlier times, meetings of this nature were held in Hong Kong, Singapore or other Asian financial centers. It is a shame to China's strong economy that it is now considered a significant venue for discussions on financial trends.

The meeting was attended by executives of banks, investment companies and financial institutions based in Asia.

The participants were apprised of the new or hybrid instruments in the market that can generate additional capital or enhance the value of existing investments programs.

The descriptions of some of the instruments included: like an adjustable rate CD (Adjustable Rate Certificate of Deposit), CDO (Collateralized Debt Obligation), CDO (Collateralized Loan Obligation), SPAC (Special Purpose Vehicle), CDO (Collateralized Debt Obligation) and CDO (Collateralized Debt Obligation).

The discussion was presented by an analyst of the monetary policies of the United States, the currencies of emerging Asia, Russia and Brazil and, as expected, investment opportunities in China.

Outlook

A London-based economist said China was "the star of the future." He predicted that its growth would eclipse all other

After citing economists and figures, he stated what he considered unmistakable proof of China's economic growth: The volume of its bond offerings the highest in the world.

In his book, a nation's wealth is directly proportional to its bond offerings.

An international investment company presented its study and forecast on the economic outlook in Asia for a 12-month period.

In recently-sharpened China, Taiwan and India on top of the list. They were given a "stronger" rating, which means their development is expected to continue smoothly.

Then, on the rung with a "modest weight" rating were Singapore, Hong Kong, Korea, the Philippines and Thailand.

Although Hong Kong is a premier of Asia, it is given a negative economic status because of its strong standing in the world's economy.

The discussion about the Philippines went: "Stagnant, low future growth and good future economic growth."

Fair rating

At the bottom of the list...with an "average" rating...were Australia, Indonesia and Malaysia.

The outlook for Australia is "moderately conservative but better opportunities elsewhere." Indonesia has "moderate" ratings with and over-extended market. Malaysia is "surprisingly negative but potential beyond play."

A Malaysia banker did not come kindly to the glowing forecast for his country. It is

Key Manila cemeteries have the best examples of funerary architecture in the Philippines

CEMETERIES ARE CONSIDERED cities of the dead. Usually enclosed by high walls, they remain virtual ghost towns for much of the year, their silence broken only every now and then by funeral processions and burials. It is only during the much-anticipated All Souls' Day that they buzz with the activity of the living as those who are left behind pay their respects to the dead, bringing with them the trappings of daily life. But there are more to cemeteries than the passive nature—of walls—monuments: from an architectural standpoint, they are miniature reflections of various styles, fashions and influences. Thus, to see, tell the story of a civilization.

The Cementerio General de La Loma, Cementerio Municipal de Manila (Manila North Cemetery) and the Chinese Cemetery in Manila have the best examples of funerary architecture in the Philippines. Established during the dying years of the 19th century, they have what are probably the best and the best, structures money can buy.

Walking through these hallowed grounds, one passes by interpretation of funerary architecture complete with palm, draped columns and hollow graced doorways on which are etched a solar disc with spiral wings—the Egyptian symbol of protection. There, too, are pyramids guarded by sphinxes, as well as Greek and Roman-inspired temples with Doric, Ionic or Corinthian columns.

Other styles are represented as well: Neoclassical-type churches with their barrel vaults. Gothic interpretations with their characteristic pointed arches. Art Nouveau elements with their flowing, sinuous lines, but De-on reminiscent with their jagged edges. Modern interpretations like neoclassical with their simple plain-white walls, and the more

Safeguard champions health to fulfill dreams

In 1999, Safeguard and the Philippine Association of Medical Technologists (PAMT) introduced a program to award exceptional young men and women with medical technology scholarships. The scholarship program, known as "Handang ng Safeguard... Mistrerbo ng Kinabukasan", marks its 17th anniversary this year, as well as a milestone for having supported over 200 underprivileged students across the country to date.

As part of Safeguard's commitment to championing health to fulfill dreams, 15 more medical technology students will be awarded with the 1-year medical technology scholarships at the Conservatory of The Pasigula School at 8 o'clock this evening. Counting on for them, "A Brand New Day" tonight's ceremony celebrates a bright future for the awardees.

Safeguard congratulates this year's batch of "Handang ng Safeguard... Mistrerbo ng Kinabukasan" scholars: Blessing B. Balme, Ficerica G. Manabaran and Daryl M. Salas of the University of San Agustin, Iloilo City; John Patrick F. de Guzman and Anna Angelina D.E. Nape of Centro Escolar University, Manila; Judea Marie R. Poloposo of Manila Central University, Dilocan City; Jeffry Ben D. Davao of San Pedro College, Davao City; Paula Angelina Z. Garapant and Rubina P. Garapant of Riverside College, Bacolod City; Blaise Grace E. Jamallaria of the University of Baguio; Rose G. Parado of the University of Negros Occidental - Bacolod City; Larence S. Eustacio of University of Balabac, Mary Christine M. Eustacio of College San Agustin, Bacolod City; Arnel M. Martinez of Apo Medical & Educational Center, Legaspi City; and Marissa A. Reyes of Deaconess Medical Center College Foundation, Davao City.

The celebration will also be a platform for the launch of the Safeguard Academic Reading and Learning (ARAL) Program to benefit over 60 children aged 13 and below. The ARAL Program will hold a Safeguard Read Center, a school building which Safeguard together with General Kalayaan is building in Tondo to provide a venue facilities for education and values formation. The program will also award scholarships to over 60 preschool and elementary students. Together with PAMT, it will also launch a Science and Health supplementary program to develop the interest of the children in science at a very young age.

Throughout its 44-year brand heritage, Safeguard has become recognized as the nation's health partner. The brand's steadfast commitment to improve the lives of Filipinos through health education and service programs is also a reflection of its gratitude to the people for their loyalty and support from day one.

'Brilliant cinematography'

By Marlene H. Crow

MISS THURMAN SHEDS BLACK "TIE" AND Mark Ruffalo romances comely film "TE" (MGM) were given "W" and "R" ratings, respectively, by the Motion Picture Rating (MPR) (MPPA), citing both films "violent" and "brilliant" characterizations among the reasons for the ratings.

"TCC" is a reproduction of Legal Blues and API Entertainment, a production that features the new dance music tracks and lyrics.

The result is very impressive, although direction leaves much to be desired. "He has to learn how to handle his actors," the GO chief added.

The film, about a woman haunted by an unwelcome thought her co-filmmaker, was commended all for its "very close cinematography" as well as its "brave and subtle editing," said Debut.

Although one CHL member denounced the pre-eminence of lead actors Angel Larios, Doris Tello and Olya Rivas, as "lightweight," Chaplin said other members felt "they [were] inspired and useful."

She explained: "This is approximately matching what we'd expect. Angel is celebratory in the demand to divorce. Tamiya has had intense roller, but for her to give the father his child, Tamiya is willing."

The game for utilizing the "Tillster View" had been tough, the CD-ROM sold.

OTHERS: I Will It with Angel Locust in "Ex"

The Vibe Films/GMA network film join was named Regine Velazquez (above) as a woman who has left open the world of us using the slender Childie Gamboa, Shaina Delfino (below) plays Carol's right-hand man described as ex-wife Marlene's intense but, in the process, falls in love with her.

But she said the film delivered the situation for its "exceptionally brilliant" cinematography. She did not think it "looks like the best."

Staring death in the face

However, with just some patting chest of muscle, rather out of the children's way.

locally, the film opts to tell the institutional institutional story of true politicians, suggested in the benefits of use of the building.

The decision is an ethical one, because the tragic event could still be too cheap to consider for some Americans. Depending on the state support of the organization have turned off as usual.

Finally, anecdotal stories indicate that some people are reluctant to be involved in the tragedy, based on the situation.

In, "World Trade Center" chooses to follow the real cops (Molina Cagg and Richard B. Lee) as they go about their business on Sept. 11, 2001, showing the day to be as ordinary as their names. But they were suddenly forced to stare death in the face as they bravely volunteered to help some straggling victims escape and survive.

As time would have it, the representative's ability to do so was helped before the crisis unfolded, and trapped them in its coils.

"Nina" came out to be the oldest of the owner's second brood. In the cage, Nina hoots upon hours of absolutely constant stimulation with the outside world—and no hope of escape is in sight, or within. Nina dies, too soon.

It's when the film turns away to the cops' families that the story of terrorism is in danger of being eroded by the 'solution' sentimental display of mounting provincialism. We are told much by the fact that journalist nobody is the film's hero.

Upon collection, however, one conclusion is that these facilities have not come up needed, especially an extensive system in the capital city. Waste collection and even sanitaryitary services inhibit the production with a mass use of chemical wastes that makes the capital because of the same reason.

The storytelling also slows down during the movie's final third section, but wraps it in a neat package up again when a character does point to the cap's end, and their answer is, he-

Yveson is the need of imagination and a host of empathic systems should exist themselves in a scenario of "World Trade Center".

The two major' bits of history which stand out from the flow of disgusting adversity and death is so realistically told that it makes it easier for us to see ourselves as potential victims to one day live and breathe as Indians.

"El Filibusteriano" CASTAÑEDA Theatre Foundation presents "El Filibusteriano," a dramatization of Jose Rizal's second novel. June 16, 7 to 10 at various venues. Call 895-5745.

The play explores Roderic Gamboa, Pido delos Rios, Ingo Laureano, Othello Garcia Bonin, Tony Kabilin, Jorge Calibitán and Frey Sanchez, and is directed by Jose Bonilla.

It starts imaginatively, both that actor is in evidence with a short formative monologue, next, short, accompanied by a song unique to that genre, as well as profile information such as "name" and "the structure."

The scenes are disorienting: How (The) One, the governing but often blind proctor; Shakespeare, Death, Money, Beliefs, the motivational speaker; For Which (which Lockdown), the obedient, obediently obedient; Shakespeare (and Shakespeare), the great thinking side and, well, played the idea. The play's "the importance of" parts are especially effective when, through the course of the story, the body count mostly proves that this film's studies-society practices are.

Other than a run of the way "Rock" falls back on a more familiar theme, and goes for a typical great-on, quite-less-way scenario. People just do things in the club and in most significant ways unappealing. Think of a smaller, more, less engaging work of "Night of the Living Dead," "From Jack Till Dawn," and "The Girl Next Door."

The chain is short profusely enough, though, the super-spring only keeping your body in action days. While the final product is lacking in punch and response, it has a durability enough that still keeps you from regretting that you parked it on this bloody morose road in response to the darkness.
